Their four years' work produced data on only five snow leopards, a species whose future is uncertain. Photos not seen by PW. Copyright 1989 Reed Business Information, Inc. While this book dealt with snow leopards, and has an excellent description on the snow leopards by Rodney Jackson at the end of the book, Hillard spends more time describing what it was like for her and Jackson to be on the field, the personality clashes with other biologists, and the thrill of getting to see snow leopards in the wild. This book will take you to a place you've never been, and make you want to join them (though you won't want to get bit by a snow leopard as Jackson once was). Read more. One person found this helpful. 21 Outside India and China, in 1981, the Snow Leopard Trust was founded, and the Rolex foundation gave Rodney Jackson a grant to do the first radio collaring of snow leopards in Nepal, as described in Darla Hillard, Vanishing Tracks: Four Years among the Snow Leopards of Nepal, New York: Arbor House Publishing Company, 1989. 37 Raghu Chundawat, "Ecological studies on the snow leopard and its prey species in Hemis National Park, Ladakh", PhD dissertation, University of Rajasthan, Jaipur, 1992. Interview with Raghu Chundawat, Delhi, 10 May 2013, transcript on file with Michael Lewis. 38 As quoted in John Allen, "A voice in the wilderness", On Wisconsin: University of Wisconsin Alumni Magazine (Summer 2010), pp. 22-29, 28. Snow leopards prefer steep, rugged terrain with cliffs, ridges, gullies, and slopes interspersed with rocky outcrops. In Mongolia and Tibet the cats may inhabit relatively flat or rolling terrain if sufficient cover is present. In productive habitat in Nepal, a snow leopard's home range varies from 12 to 39 km² (4.6 - 15 square miles). Snow leopards are protected in nearly all countries under national and international laws. They are listed in Appendix 1 of CITES (Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, 1977), which sets strict regulations on export or import of animals or their body parts. Only Tajikistan is not signatory to the CITES agreement.
