The Fairy Penguin is only 40cm 1ft tall and weighs about 1kg 2.2lbs.

Fairy Penguins (also known as Little Blue Penguins) are the world's smallest penguin measuring just over 25cm tall and they weigh around 1 kg. They are native to New Zealand and Southern Australia, but Weymouth was chosen as their new home due to the seaside town's average summer and winter temperatures being very similar to those experienced by the penguins in their natural habitat. With an investment in excess of £100,000 into their new purpose-built enclosure, visitors can get closer to the penguins than ever before and interact with them in a whole new way through their walkthrough island. People also used penguin droppings (guano) to fertilize the soil and help grow crops. While this seems harmless, some penguins use guano to make their nests. When the guano was gone, they had to lay their eggs on the bare ground, where they were more susceptible to predators.[2]. Because penguins have no natural land predators, they are typically not afraid of people. A wild penguin typically lives between 15-20 years, spending approximately 75% of their lives in the water.[7]. The most rare penguin in the world is the Yellow-eyed Penguin, with only around 5,000 living in the wild. Little Penguins or Fairy Penguins are the smallest species of penguin. These tiny birds, which have a brilliant blue sheen, only grow to just over a foot tall and a little over three pounds. Fairy penguins can be found on the coastlines of New Zealand and Australia. 3. Not All Penguins Live in the Cold. Only two of 17 species of penguins that exist live in Antarctica, where the average temperature is -58 degrees Fahrenheit. As Fairy Penguin and human relations are key to the success of everything our organization works so tirelessly for, TCFPNLP has tasked our Forward Intelligence Network (F.I.N) with finding out more information surrounding this plot in the hopes of protecting your safety & avoiding another penguin/human blood war. If diplomacy by our International Community Engagement Department (I.C.E.D) fails we will look to restrict access to South Pole transport hubs for gang members through deployment of our Critical Response Action Battle-Group (C.R.A.B). The counseling services we provide have consistently been delivered to more and more Fairy Penguins each year since we started back in 94.
