The Popol Vuh, often dubbed the Bible of the Maya, narrates the creation myth of the Maya Quiché of Guatemala and the Story of the Hero Twins. As a third attempt, the gods created men from wood and women from reeds. These people populated the world and procreated, but they soon forgot their gods and were punished with a flood. The few who survived were transformed into monkeys. Finally, the gods decided to mold mankind from maize. This generation, which includes the present human race, is able to worship and nourish the gods. In the narration of the Popol Vuh, the creation of the people of corn is preceded by the story of the Hero Twins. The Hero Twins Story. For an exploration of Quiché epistemological boundaries, the Popol Vuh is without rival as a starting place. Its writer takes a good deal of trouble to indicate his epistemic grounds, which until he reaches the sixteenth century at the end of the book lie beyond the limits of anything he himself experienced—or, to put that into Quiché, beyond anything xuuachih, âœhe faced, which is the Quiché way of saying âœsaw with his own eyes. In the middle of the book, as we shall see, he even sets forth an explicit epistemological theory. It is in the opening sentence that Save.

A work of art, artwork, art piece, piece of art or art object is an aesthetic physical item or artistic creation. Apart from "work of art", which may be used of any work regarded as art in its widest sense, including works from literature and music, these terms apply principally to tangible, portable forms of visual art: An example of fine art, such as a painting or sculpture. An object that has been designed specifically for its aesthetic appeal, such as a piece of jewellery. The Popol Vuh is the story of creation according to the Quiche Maya of the region known today as Guatemala. Translated as 'The Council Book'... The Quiche referred to the book as an Ilb'al - an instrument of sight - and it was known as "The Book of the Mat" because of the woven mats the people would sit on to hear the work recited at the council house. One such building, at Copan, features stone lintels 'woven' to look like such matting. In the beginning of Book I the unknown author states Historical Context of Popol Vuh. The Quich' people were a tribe that made up part of the Mayan empire in what is now Guatemala and southern Mexico, on the Yucatan Peninsula. Though documentation of the Quich' kingdom began around 1200 CE when foreigners from the Mexican Gulf Coast conquered the local tribes, tribes had been in the area since 600 BCE. Those foreigners are, presumably, what the Popol Vuh mentions as the first humans: they included the three Quich' lineages and four other tribes, all of which the book lists. When Written: The Popol Vuh existed as an oral story and was recorded in hieroglyphs prior to its translation to phonetic Quich' sometime in the 1550s. Where Written: The Quich' kingdom, modern-day Guatemala.
