140. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Philanthropy and Real Utopias

Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Rob Reich, Stanford University
Presider: Rob Reich, Stanford University
Panelist: Rob Reich, Stanford University
Discussant: Kieran Healy, Duke University

People have been giving away their money, property, and time to others for millennia. What's novel about the contemporary practice of philanthropy is the availability of tax incentives to give money away. Such incentives are built into tax systems in nearly all developed and many developing democracies. More generally, laws govern the creation of foundations and nonprofit organizations and they spell out the rules under which these organizations may operate. Laws set up special tax exemptions for philanthropic and nonprofit organizations, and they frequently permit tax concessions for individual and corporate donations of money and property to qualifying non-governmental organizations.

In this sense, philanthropy is not an invention of the state but ought to be viewed today as an artifact of the state; we can be certain that philanthropy would not have the form it currently does in the absence of the various laws that structure it and tax incentives that encourage it. This session specifies and assesses three possible justifications for the existence of tax incentives for charitable giving, identifies a distinctive role for philanthropy in democracies, and argues for a fundamental re-design of the current legal framework governing philanthropy.

141. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Utopias "For Real": Contours of Racial Utopia

Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Eduardo Bonilla-Silva, Duke University

Presider: Tyrone A. Forman, Emory University
Panelist: Eduardo Bonilla-Silva, Duke University
Discussants: Tyrone A. Forman, Emory University
Kimberle Crenshaw, University of California-Los Angeles

Utopia will not be "for real" here or elsewhere unless racial matters are included and addressed in a forthright manner. Accordingly, in this paper I do four things to advance utopias for real. First, I provide a friendly critique of the "real utopias" project as currently conceived. Second, I suggest the urgent need for mental emancipation (a la Bob Marley) from the emotional, intellectual, and spiritual tentacles of white supremacy as the foundation for any utopian process. Second, I outline a number of individual and collective freedom practices needed to move towards utopia. Albeit my discussion is broad, I tackle some practices we need to exercise in academia. Lastly, I advance, with lots of trepidation given the collective nature of the struggle for utopia, the contours of racial utopia. I conclude with a short dream of how I, as an Am-e-Rican, hope America and the world look like in 2050.

142. Thematic Session. Democracy's Blueprints: The Globalization of Participatory Budgeting

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Ernesto Ganuza, Advanced Social Research Institute

Presider: Ernesto Ganuza, Advanced Social Research Institute

Panelists: Christine Allegretti, University of Coimbra
Baogang He, Deakin University
Gena Miller, University of Illinois-Chicago
Tiago Peixoto, World Bank

Discussant: Ernesto Ganuza, Advanced Social Research Institute

The Orçamento Participativo was created in Porto Alegre in 1989. From then until now the OP has been globalized, so we find experiences in all five continents. The success achieved by the Porto Alegre experience has led governments of countries with cultural and political traditions very different entering the PB in their localities. However, the Brazilian OP has gradually transformed in that journey and it has been implemented according to the local contexts. We wonder what exactly has traveled, as well as the impact and success of the Participatory Budgeting beyond Brazil. To answer these questions we propose a debate on four experiences of four different continents: USA, Europe (Italy), Africa (DR Congo) and China. Thus, we could see the meaning of the globalization of a specific local experience and its different outcomes in political and cultural different contexts.

Compelling Interests and Substantial Burdens: Religious Minorities and the Adjudication of Free Exercise Claims in the U.S. State Courts, 1997-2011. Robert Martin, Pennsylvania State University

Discussant: Allen Hertzke, University of Oklahoma
Utopian visions and institutions frequently face resistance or even open persecution from the established order. Religious utopias are no exception. Despite assurances of freedoms in the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights and additional assurances in approximately 90 percent of all national constitutions, the freedoms of religious utopias and other minority religions are routinely denied. This session explores the sources and extent of these denials as well as the consequences of denying religious freedoms. In particular, the panel members will look at the consequences for provoking social conflict and for limiting other human rights.

144. Thematic Session. Is Marriage Part of a Utopian Future?

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Pepper J. Schwartz, University of Washington

Presider: Pepper J. Schwartz, University of Washington

Panelists: Rosanna Hertz, Wellesley College
Stephanie Coontz, Evergreen State College
Scott Coltrane, University of Oregon
Mignon R. Moore, University of California-Los Angeles

This session will be organized around the changing nature of marriage and to what extent it can be the right "tent" for equitable and committed relationships and families in the Utopian future. The debate over who should be married has been lively with many nay sayers and stake holders having directly opposing passionate views. Where should this end up? For same sex couples, for opposite sex couples, for larger configurations of love and loyalty or perhaps in alternative forms not yet realized? Our panelists will no doubt have diverse Utopian visions.

145. Thematic Session. Marxism and/or Real Utopias

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Rhonda F. Levine, Colgate University

Presider: Rhonda F. Levine, Colgate University

Panelists: Michael Burawoy, University of California-Berkeley

Leo Panitch, York University

David Norman Smith, University of Kansas

Goran Therborn, Uppsala University

This session will discuss both the compatibility of Marxism and the concept and practice of Real Utopias, as well as how Marxism and Real Utopias as theory and practice diverge.

146. Thematic Session. Workers' Search for Utopia

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizers: Howard A. Kimeldorf, University of Michigan

Barry Eidlin, University of California-Berkeley

Presider: Barry Eidlin, University of California-Berkeley

Panelists: Peter B. Evans, University of California-Berkeley

Howard A. Kimeldorf, University of Michigan

Pun Ngai, Hong Kong University of Science and Technology

Gay W. Seidman, University of Wisconsin-Madison

Workers' movements classically embody a central tension that powerfully illuminates the recurrent quest for utopia: they must balance the need to realize immediate objectives with a commitment to social transformation. As a result, workers' movements have historically found themselves on the leading edge of what we now recognize as "real utopian" projects. While striking this balance has proven elusive—and the history of workers' movements is replete with more than its share of failures—these movements nevertheless provide a unique vantage point for reconsidering the dynamics and challenges inherent in building real utopian projects. A distinguished panel of labor scholars will consider and assess the efforts of workers' movements' to actualize utopian visions within a global and cross-national context. Beyond elucidating the local and comparative contexts that have shaped those efforts, the panel will analyze the "real utopian" projects that have emerged from workers' struggles for a better world.

148. Professional Development Workshop. Teaching Sociology in a Community College:

A Panel Discussion

Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Rifat A. Salam, City University of New York-Borough of Manhattan Community College

Leader: Rifat A. Salam, City University of New York-Borough of Manhattan Community College

Co-Leaders: Sheldon Applewhite, City University of New York-Borough of Manhattan Community College

Lisa Handler, Community College of Philadelphia

Amy Elizabeth Traver, City University of New York-Queensborough Community College

Community colleges play a significant role in higher education in the United States, providing a gateway to many students who might not otherwise have aspired to a college education. Over forty percent of all college students in the United States are enrolled at community colleges. Yet most of the general resources on teaching sociology and indeed most textbooks are geared towards traditional four year college students. Teaching at a community college offers a unique set of challenges and opportunities and sociologists are especially well-positioned to offer students a critical perspective on society and their own experiences. This professional development workshop will include topics such as pedagogy and teaching strategies, understanding the diverse experiences of students, and how to navigate a career at a community college. We will demonstrate ways to better understand and address the complex lives of community college students and their needs. Panelists will also discuss the challenges and rewards of a career at a community college, including how to balance research and teaching, and advice for seeking out ways to further your professional development as scholars and/or teachers. There will be a hands-on component dealing with specific teaching challenges and strategies and participants are encouraged to bring in specific issues and challenges for discussion. This workshop/panel is designed for anyone who is currently teaching or thinking about teaching at a community college.

149. Policy and Research Workshop. Social Science Data Infrastructure

Hyatt Regency Denver

David van Riper, University of Minnesota

Sheela Kennedy, University of Minnesota

Pamela Herd, University of Wisconsin-Madison

The Sociology Program at the National Science Foundation (NSF) supports large-scale data resources that are widely used by scholars across the social sciences and excellent tools for scholars interested in interdisciplinary research. In 2009 the Sociology Program renewed support for the General Social Survey (GSS); it also supports the Luxembourg Income Study (LIS) and the International Integrated Public Micro-Data Series (IPUMS-International), and has funded a new data resource, School Attendance Boundary Information System (SABINS); all comprise publicly available social science data that can be used by sociologists to complete comparative research, assess trends in public attitudes, and examine educational outcomes in more precise geographical locations. NSF program officers will discuss funding opportunities available for interdisciplinary research; and along with representatives from major NSF-supported data infrastructure projects will provide information on publicly available tools, instrumentation, shared databases and cyberinfrastructure for disciplinary and interdisciplinary research. The session is interactive; audience participation is encouraged.

150. Teaching Workshop. Connecting Undergraduates to the Empirical Base of Sociology

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: William H. Frey, Brookings Institution

Leader: William H. Frey, Brookings Institution

Co-Leaders: Lynette F. Hoelter, University of Michigan

John Paul DeWitt, University of Michigan

This workshop will introduce teachers to tools and approaches toward integrating “hands on” data analysis into lower level undergraduate courses. It will feature resources available with the Social Science Data Analysis Network (www.SSDAN.net) from the University of Michigan’s Population Studies Center, the Online Learning Center at the Inter-university Consortium of Political and Social Research and www.TeachingwithData.org. These resources make available new data from the Census Bureau’s American Community Survey, several ICPSR surveys and other data driven learning activities. Participants will learn about how to use the resources and adopt them in their courses. They will also be given information on how to become part of a network of faculty who will share data, classroom exercises and experiences with quantitative reasoning. Materials will be provided to assist adoption.

Regional Spotlight Tour 03. Denver Local Food/Urban Agriculture

Off-site Location

Session Organizer: Michelle R. Walker, University of Colorado-Boulder
Leader: Michelle R. Walker, University of Colorado-Boulder

The local food and urban agriculture movement has taken hold in Denver, growing substantially in recent years, with a mission to transform the food system and change how individuals think about what they eat. Denver was recently rated as one of the ten best cities for local food by The Huffington Post. This regional spotlight tour showcases a few of the many innovative urban agriculture projects currently taking place in Denver, Colorado. It includes stops at two urban farms, where attendees will get a chance to walk among the gardens and hear from farmers and other local food advocates about the mission and logistics involved in these projects. Tour guides will supplement garden visits with additional information provided during the bus ride. The tour will conclude with a "local food" lunch and discussion about distributing food from agriculture projects, which will take place at a restaurant that showcases locavore cuisine. This tour is being coordinated with the assistance of Slow Food Denver, a chapter of Slow Food USA (which has over 200 chapters around the U.S.) and Grow Local Colorado, a volunteer organization with multiple civic and community partners. These organizations have been coordinating local food tours over the last year. For more information on these organizations, see <http://www.slowfooddenver.org> and <http://www.growlocalcolorado.org>.

177. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Practical Anarchism in Networked Societies
Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Yochai Benkler, Harvard
University

Panelist: Yochai Benkler, Harvard University
Discussant: Eben Moglen, Columbia University

The networked information economy is typified by radical decentralization of the core capital inputs into the highest-added-value economic activities of the most advanced economies. Computation, communications, storage, and sensing are widely distributed in the population of the wealthier economies, and in gradually growing parts of the middle classes of less wealthy economies; while human insight, knowledge, inventiveness, and creativity have always been individually embodied. As a result, effective decentralized cooperation relying on neither the state nor hierarchical firms has become an increasingly significant and reliable form of self-organized action. Wikipedia we all know. But user-owned wifi networks, free software, and distributed storage/server models are providing examples of self-organized production of basic infrastructure. Decentralized finance suggests shades of Proudhon's bank. The networked fourth estate suggests an increasing role for radically decentralized reporting as an important counterweight to commercial media. The paper explores possibilities and limitations for practical anarchism in networked capitalism.

178. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Reviving
Democratic Citizenship
Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Bruce Ackerman, Yale University
Panelist: Bruce Ackerman, Yale University
Discussant: John Gastil, Pennsylvania State University

Many of our inherited civic institutions are dead or dying. Besides the formal act of voting, the most significant act of citizenship is to show your passport at the border, and thereby gain re-admission to the country. But it is quite possible to live in America today without regularly dealing with others as fellow citizens – fellow workers or professionals, yes; fellow religionists, yes; but fellow citizens, focusing on our common predicament as Americans? The “citizenship agenda” aims to create new sociological contexts for the exercise of meaningful citizenship in ordinary life. This is the unifying theme of a series of books: Voting with Dollars (with Ian Ayres), granting each voter 50 “democracy dollars” to give to his favorite candidate or political party, Deliberation Day (with James Fishkin) proposing a new national holiday before each election at which citizens deliberate on the merits of rival candidates, and The Decline and Fall of the American Republic, proposing a system of electronic newsvouchers to rejuvenate professional journalism in the age of the internet. I will be emphasizing the synergistic relationships between these initiatives.

Local Currencies. Adam Alleman, Denver Metro

In communities across the globe, activists are creating their own local currencies or non-cash exchange networks as an alternative to national currencies. These “do-it-yourself” groups are established with the intention of making goods and services more accessible and building social capital. Some are politically radical and advocated as alternatives to capitalism. This session begins by identifying the major forms of contemporary local currencies and situating such alternatives within the context of localism and the numerous new movements aimed at localization. Next, empirical evidence from three U.S. time banks will be presented in an exploration of participant motivations, exchanges occurring within these networks, and participant outcomes. Finally, Denver-area local currency coordinators will provide details of day-to-day operations and discuss the challenges of organizing and sustaining these systems. Implications about the extent to which these projects can be seen as emancipatory and paving the way for greater change will be discussed.

180. Thematic Session. Real Utopian Childhoods
Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Karin A. Martin, University of Michigan

Presider: Karin A. Martin, University of Michigan
Panelists: Allison Pugh, University of Virginia
Karyn Lacy, University of Michigan
Emily W. Kane, Bates College

This session will explore the everyday social lives of children with a particular focus on how economic, racial, and gendered institutions shape children's everyday lives. If we understand children as social actors in their own right, and not beings in the process of becoming, how might this further elaborate our understandings of possible real utopias for childhood?

The intersection of religion and stratification was once central to early sociological thought and practice, with Karl Marx writing about religion as an ideology of exploitation and Max Weber discussing three class based systems of religious meaning. In recent years, with minor exceptions, it represents an almost pure vacuum in scholarship. This session addresses this void by exploring how both religious institutions and personal religiosity impact status attainment.

182. Thematic Session. Utopia and the Future of the Family

Session Organizer: Judith Treas, University of California-Irvine

Changing Counts, Counting Change: Toward a More Inclusive Definition of Family. Brian Powell, Indiana University

New Frontiers in the Work-family Interface? Tanja Van Der Lippe,

Family Utopias? Family Complexity and Family Change. Wendy Diane Manning, Bowling Green State University

Sociologists have made important contributions to our understanding of the impediments to achieving a family life that promotes equality and inclusivity, balances the needs of home and workplace, and sustains meaningful relations over the life course. Although there is general agreement on these utopian goals, our often myopic attention to what is wrong with contemporary families has stymied pro-active thinking: What concrete transformations are underway to bring about meaningful family change? This session emphasizes "translational science." The session invites a cast of distinguished sociologists to build on what is known about families in order to identify public policies, cultural schema, economic conditions, and other factors that can and must change in order for families to change for the better. Necessarily, the panelists' analyses will incorporate multi-level insights, cross-national comparisons, and description of trends and emerging developments in multiple domains, ranging from new cultural definitions of family to policy experiments improving work-family integration.

183. Special Session. Importance of Federally Supported Interdisciplinary Research
Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Brad Smith, American Sociological Association

President: Brad Smith, American Sociological Association

Panelists: Robert Kaplan, National Institutes of Health Office of Behavioral and Social Science Research

Fred Block, University of California-Davis

This session will examine the policy implications of federally funded research. In particular the session will focus NIH's support for social and behavioral science and the past successes and future vision of the Office of Behavioral and Social Science research (OBSSR). In addition, the panelists will speak about the long-term economic benefits of federally supported research, especially multi-discipline research.

184. ASA Rose Series Author Meets Critics
Session. Good Jobs, Bad Jobs: The Rise of Polarized and Precarious Employment Systems in the United States, 1970s to 2000s (Russell Sage Foundation, 2011) by Arne L. Kalleberg

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Lauren Krivo, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Author: Arne L. Kalleberg, University of North Carolina

President: Patricia A. Roos, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers

Critics: Pierrette Hondagneu-Sotelo, University of Southern California

Melvin L. Oliver, University of California-Santa Barbara

Teresa A. Sullivan, University of Virginia

The economic boom of the 1990s veiled a grim reality: in addition to the growing gap between rich and poor, the gap between good and bad quality jobs was also expanding. The postwar prosperity of the mid-twentieth century enabled millions of American workers to join the middle class, but as author Arne L. Kalleberg shows, by the 1970s this upward movement had slowed, in part due to the steady disappearance of secure, well-paying industrial jobs. Ever since, precarious employment has been on the rise—paying low wages, offering few benefits, and with virtually no long-term security. Good Jobs, Bad Jobs traces this trend to large-scale transformations in the American labor market and the changing demographics of low-wage workers. Kalleberg draws on nearly four decades of survey data, as well as his own research, to evaluate trends in U.S. job quality and suggest ways to improve American labor market practices and social policies. Good Jobs, Bad Jobs deftly shows that the decline in U.S. job quality is not the result of fluctuations in the business cycle, but rather the result of economic restructuring and the disappearance of institutional protections for workers. Kalleberg demonstrates that building a better safety net—increasing government responsibility for worker health care and retirement, as well as strengthening unions—can go a long way toward redressing the effects of today's volatile labor market. Only government, employers and labor working together on long-term strategies—including an expanded safety net, strengthened legal protections, and better training opportunities—can help reverse this trend.

185. Regional Spotlight Session. Resourcing Coalitions: Problems and Pitfalls

Nancy Reichman, University of Denver

Presider: Lisa M. Martinez, University of Denver

Panelists: Lisa Duran, Rights for All People

Jason McKain, Colorado Progressive Coalition

Discussant: Hava Rachel Gordon, University of Denver

How do organizations maintain their grassroots character in the face of the mounting need for resources such as funding and media attention? Invited panelists will share insights about the work they do in Denver communities, and address the problems and pitfalls of operating in a context of limited resources.

186. Departmental Management and Leadership Workshop. Implementing Curricular Changes to Better Prepare Graduate Students for Positions in Applied Settings

Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Augusto Diana, Department of Health and Human Services

Leader: Augusto Diana, Department of Health and Human Services

Panelists: Angela A Aidala, Columbia University

Michael S. Fleischer, Organizational Dynamics Consulting

Harry Perlstadt, Michigan State University

Michael I Hirsch, Huston Tillotson University

This workshop will bring together sociologists from academia, applied programs and professional associations affiliated with or apart from universities, and the world of sociological practice outside the university. Topics to be covered and panelists who will participate are included below: Angela Aidala, Columbia University, will discuss applied programs affiliated with universities and interdisciplinary programs, which exist at many academic institutions - criminal justice, law, policy and society, socio-medical sciences and health sciences, to name a few - as well as some examples of research centers affiliated with universities. These centers and programs have a focus on applied and policy-oriented training and research, addressing the needs of students who are overwhelmingly oriented to careers outside academia. Mike Fleischer, Organizational Dynamics Consulting, and Harry Perlstadt, Michigan State University, will discuss applied programs housed at universities which seek to build career skills in sociology majors. These programs may seek accreditation from the Commission on the Accreditation of Programs in Applied and Clinical Sociology (CAPACS) to offer some status recognition for their universities and their graduates. Specifics of the accreditation process and information about the types of offerings of these programs provide will be presented. Finally, Augie Diana, National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) and Mike Hirsch, Huston-Tillotson University, will discuss professional associations that foster critical thinking and work opportunities outside academia. Specifically, panelists will present information about the Association for Applied and Clinical Sociology (AACS) and Sociological Practice and Public Sociology (SPPS) Section of ASA which are in the forefront of such efforts.

187. Professional Development Workshop. ASA

ASA editors from a variety of ASA journals will provide insights and advice on publishing in scholarly journals, including preparing manuscripts for submission, selecting a journal, responding to revise and resubmit decisions, and deciding what to do if your paper is rejected. The workshop will provide opportunity for audience members to ask the editors questions about publishing.

188. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Theory: Creative Approaches to an Essential Topic

Leader: Natalia Ruiz-Junco, American University

Panelists: Jill Niebrugge-Brantley, American

University

Randall Collins, University of Pennsylvania

Patricia Madoo Lengermann, George

Washington University

The first part of this workshop will be devoted to a discussion of why theory is essential to sociologists. We will answer the question: What makes theory an essential topic? Rather than assuming that it is, the workshop will focus on why and how theory is essential to sociological pedagogy and the sociological endeavor generally. The second part of the workshop will revolve around creative ways in the teaching and learning of sociological theory. We will focus on the question: What techniques are effective in the teaching and learning of theory at different levels of instruction? This workshop will conclude with some reflections on the present and future of theory in the sociology curriculum.

213. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Parecon (Participatory Economics)

Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Michael Albert, Z-Magazine

Panelist: Michael Albert, Z-Magazine

A real utopia will have an economy that accomplishes needed production and consumption, that meets needs and develops potentials consistent with favored values, and that is classless. Participatory economy does the job, advancing self management, solidarity, diversity, and equity and removing all structural bases for class division. This session will summarize parecon's features and explore some implications for contemporary efforts at change. It will also compare parecon to other proposed visions for a better economic future, including market socialism and centrally planned socialism. And finally, it will report on projects around the world aimed at attaining both participatory economics, and a broader participatory society, as well.

214. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Reimagining the Corporation

Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Gerald F. Davis, University of Michigan

President: Gerald F. Davis, University of Michigan

Panelist: Gerald F. Davis, University of Michigan

Discussant: William G Roy, University of California-Los Angeles

From the merger wave at the turn of the 20th century that created them until the bust-up takeover wave of the 1980s that disassembled them, publicly traded corporations were the dominant social institution of the American economy. They provided long-term employment and social welfare benefits that were provided by states in other industrialized economies, and they shaped the currents of politics and trade in innumerable ways. But the shareholder value movement and the disaggregation of contemporary methods of production and exchange have inadvertently driven the corporation into retreat in the US. The concentration of assets and employment have been in decline for three decades, and there are now half as many public corporations as there were in 1997. Moreover, ferment in both laws and feasible organizing methods suggest that we are on the verge of a substantial re-imagining of the structures organizing the economy. This session contemplates how changes in law, information and communication technologies, and productive technologies open up new possibilities for (sociologically-informed) democratic governance of our post-corporate economy.

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Katherine Beckett, University of Washington

President: Bruce Western, Harvard University

Panelists: Christopher Uggen, University of Minnesota

Bruce Western, Harvard University

Marie Gottschalk, University of Pennsylvania

This panel will explore the dystopian features of the U.S. penal system and consider how a system of punishment oriented toward more utopian ideals might (or might not) come into being. In particular, panelists will reflect on the challenges associated with advocating for penal change, and identify promising strategies for building new alliances and institutions and implementing new measures of success.

216. Thematic Session. New Ways to Organize: Recent Successes for Direct Care Workers

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Heidi I. Hartmann, Institute for Women's Policy Research

President: Heidi I. Hartmann, Institute for Women's Policy Research

Panelists: Leonilla Vega, Direct Care Alliance

Ai-jen Poo, Domestic Workers Alliance

This session will discuss various organizing efforts in the direct care labor market which are working to bring together direct care workers, consumers, and others who have a stake in seeing improvement in the quality of care provided, the quality of working conditions for direct care workers, and recognition of the importance of this work by broader society. Direct care work for children, older people and people with disabilities will all be considered, though the focus will be on elder care. The success of these organizing efforts and their ability to move us towards a more utopian future with greater justice for both who provide care and those who receive it will be discussed.

This thematic panel considers sources of knowledge production and practice that challenge received concepts of development/globalization, in the spirit of 'real utopias.' It proceeds from the understanding that 'development,' a universalizing self-referential Western concept, mediates global capitalist relations, negating and/or appropriating other epistemes and practical knowledges. The panel will address this dynamic by considering projections of possibility in this moment of declining Western capitalist hegemony. Given the urgency and multiplicity of crises facing the world, post-development models are necessarily multi-faceted, essential, and yet arguably unifying in their diversity – given their historicity. Ecological and feminist epistemologies, new conceptions of the commons, food sovereignty and bioregionalism, solidarity communities, the movement of movements in the World Social Forum, and forms of decommodification exemplify and/or inform incipient 'real utopias. Panelists will reflect on emerging projects and their interconnections.

218. Thematic Session. The Social and Solidarity Economy: Perspectives from Quebec, Europe, Latin America, and East Asia (South Korea)

Panelists: Marguerite Mendell, Concordia University

José Luis Coraggio, Universidad Nacional de

General Sarmiento

Jean-Louis Laville, Conservatoire National des

Eric Bidet, Le Mans University

Historically, the social economy has referred to cooperatives; the solidarity economy is a more recent term adopted to capture the expanded socio-economic role of associations, civil society organizations and non-profit organizations. Debates on definitions have, to a large extent, ceded to a common understanding that both these terms refer to collectively owned enterprises and to their capacity to transform patterns of production, consumption and redistribution in countries throughout the world. More than numerous organizations/enterprises present in several sectors, the social and solidarity economy represents a coherent, systemic and alternative model of resource allocation and governance. That said, the social and solidarity economy today remains a fragmented landscape of experiences and initiatives bounded by history, culture, politics, as this panel will describe. How to weave these experiences together is a challenge that will be raised by this panel. Despite the variability between countries and even within countries (the unique Quebec experience in Canada), common trends are confirming the significant transformative potential of the social and solidarity economy.

Incorporating Climate Change into the Sociological Curriculum. Kari Marie Norgaard, University of Oregon

In view of the societal significance of human-induced climate change, ASA established the Task Force on Sociology and Global Climate Change to provide sociological analyses of this phenomenon. The Task Force is preparing a multi-authored report with chapters on the human drivers of climate change, societal impacts of climate change, and adaptation to climate change as well as more specific topics such as the role of market actors and structures, consumption and mitigation, civil society, public opinion and attitudes, and climate politics and denial. Additional chapters will focus specifically on the implications of climate change for the discipline of sociology. This session will consist of an overview of the work of the Task Force by its Chair (Dunlap), and presentations on the challenges and opportunities posed by climate change for both sociological/social theory (Clark) and methodology (Jorgenson) as well as on incorporating climate change into the sociological curriculum (Norgaard).

As a sociologist, you can speak to the media and to policymakers about important discoveries and issues related to the discipline. This workshop will provide insights to help you communicate better with the media and policymakers. ASA works in Washington to advance the social and behavior sciences and ASA members can make their views known to elected officials. This is a fundamental right and essential to the future of social science funding. Likewise, ASA members can be a resource to the media. Sharing their scientific discoveries and expertise to the press when breaking news hits and studies are released.

Session Organizer: Jean H. Shin, American Sociological Association

Leader: Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association

Co-Leader: Olga V. Mayorova, American Sociological Association

Prior research suggests that new technology, such as digital libraries, by themselves do not necessarily result in diffusion. ASA is interested in implementing a number of social interventions to increase the adoption of the TRAILS digital library beyond the existing network of teaching and learning scholars. This workshop will ask participants to evaluate the potential feasibility and impact of a series of social interventions that broaden and increase social participation. These range from giving awards for innovative curriculum design, to matching teaching and learning scholars with graduate students, to offering special TRAILS access to faculty from underserved institutions.

248. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Corporations with Worker Ownership and Profit Sharing
Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Joseph Raphael Blasi, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Presider: Raymond Russell, University of California-
Riverside
Panelist: Joseph Raphael Blasi, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Discussant: Gerald F. Davis, University of Michigan

There will be a brief overview of what is wrong with current corporate institutions where ownership of stock and income from capital tend to be highly concentrated mainly in the top 1% of employees in most corporations with an emphasis on several areas of the corporate sector where the distribution of ownership and income from capital is substantially more broad-based. There will be a summary of research indicating that the more broad-based worker ownership and profit sharing sectors represent a workable and efficient way to organize the economy. Lastly, practical legislative and executive branch proposals to facilitate the transformation to more broad-based ownership and profit sharing by citizens of large and small corporations will be presented including changes to the tax system, the banking system, and the system of higher education required to facilitate this transformation. The proposals will be framed with the idea that societies organized as republics require generally broad distribution of property in order to assure that each individual has the independence to participate in democratic discourse.

249. Real Utopia Proposal Session. Making Direct Democracy Deliberative through Random Assemblies

Hyatt Regency Denver
Session Organizer: John Gastil, Pennsylvania State University
Presider: John Gastil, Pennsylvania State University
Panelist: John Gastil, Pennsylvania State University
Discussant: Archon Fung, Harvard University

Too many critics continue to view deliberative democracy as a theoretical proposition, rather than a real body of practice. After decades of practical experiments in modern deliberative democracy, not to mention centuries of refinement of the jury system, there now exist powerful deliberative models. Two of the most important officially-sanctioned efforts come from the northwestern corner of North America—the British Columbia Citizens' Assembly and the Oregon Citizens' Initiative Review. British Columbia showed that a randomly-selected body of 150 citizens can draft first-rate legislation, which then won 57% support in a province-wide referendum election. Oregon showed that a small representative panel of 24 citizens can produce one-page analyses of ballot initiatives that influence the knowledge and judgment of the wider electorate when placed in the official Voters' Guide. Taken together, these cases show the clear potential for infusing direct democratic institutions with a deliberative impulse.

250. Thematic Session. Building a Better K-12
Education System
Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Jennifer L. Jennings, New York
University
Presider: Douglas Lee Lauen, University of North Carolina
Panelists: Dalton Conley, New York University
Jennifer L. Jennings, New York University
Aaron M. Pallas, Columbia University

In the last decade, unprecedented changes have been made in American education policy. According to their supporters, recent education reforms have the potential to reduce disparities in educational opportunities and outcomes by improving the quality of the lowest performing schools, those that poor and minority students are most likely to attend. Others contend that these reforms will reproduce and exacerbate inequalities, or have no effect at all. Building on sociologists' longstanding interest in how schools structure children's life chances, panelists in this session will explore the impact of education policies, broadly construed, on students, teacher, and schools, and how these policies affect disparities in educational opportunities and outcomes among social groups.

251. Thematic Session. Creating Real Utopias for Persons with Disabilities (co-sponsored with with Cognitive Disabilities. Peter Blanck, Syracuse University

Examining strategies for overcoming social, political, and environmental barriers faced by persons with disabilities. Papers address the desirability, viability, and achievability of "radically different institutions and social relations" (Wright 2009, pg. 1) relevant to persons with disability. Three subthemes include: • How transformative social relations can unleash the potential of persons with disabilities. Specific attention will be given to the World Health Organization's recent World Report on Disability (http://www.who.int/disabilities/world_report/2011/en/index.html), especially its recommendations on how to overcome barriers to health care, rehabilitation, education, employment, and support services, and to create the environments which will enable people with disabilities to flourish. • How social policy, such as the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, has or has not been successful in opening the doors to employment and independence for persons with disabilities. How the implementation of “universal design” standards not only alleviates environmental barriers for persons with disabilities, but also provides the groundwork for broad-scale social transformation.

252. Thematic Session. Real Utopias behind Prison Walls

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Michael Jacobson, Vera Institute of Justice

Presider: Michael Jacobson, Vera Institute of Justice

Panelist: Kelly Hannah-Moffat, University of Toronto

Open Prisons: An Innovative Perspective from Liberia. Samuel Tarley, Prison Coordinator-Liberia Prisons

Exploring Prison Conditions in Halden Fængsel, Norway's Newest Prison. Are Hoeidal, Halden Fængsel Prison-Norway

Prison Reform in the U.S. Context. Michael Jacobson, Vera Institute of Justice

Ever since the first prisons were constructed they have been the subject of reform. But what are the ideals and goals of prison reform in a global context? Can an ‘ideal’ prison exist? The concept of utopian prisons embodies different ideologies, conditions and values across cultures and time. In this panel, academics and practitioners will discuss the realities and possibilities of creating utopias in a context of punishment. First, Prof. Liebling will reflect upon her experiences of studying conditions and social dynamics in UK prisons. Next, Samuel Tarley will talk about an ‘open prison’ model for Liberia, a rehabilitative approach to help inmates maintain community ties and support their families. Are Hoeidal will share his experiences of governing Halden Fængsel in Norway, possibly the most ‘utopian’ prison ever built. Finally, Michael Jacobson will talk about prison reform in the U.S. context. This international panel will bring together a variety of perspectives, raising important questions about the future of prison reform both globally and in the US.

253. Thematic Session. The Future of Reproduction

Frances Kissling, University of Pennsylvania

It is almost 50 years since the Supreme Court ruled in Griswold that the prohibition of contraception violated a right to marital privacy. The Court later extended the privacy right to include contraception for unmarried couples and access to abortion. Those court decisions, along with the introduction of the pill and other scientific advances, have changed women's lives. They also opened a Pandora's box of opposition to the privatization of reproduction, so much so that the future of women's reproductive freedom is uncertain. Abortion is increasingly the province of poor women, who currently have 42% of abortions in the US, and experience limited access to contraception as well as resources for childbearing and rearing. State law prohibits constitutionally protected second trimester abortions, subjects women to mandatory anti-abortion counseling, requires unnecessary and invasive procedures and pits fetuses against the women who carry them. This panel will analyze these attempts and the cultural and social frames and trends that influence them as well as suggest some future approaches to reproductive health advocacy more protective of women's human rights.

254. Special Session. Public Issues, Social Reporting: A Conversation in Honor of Katha Pollitt, recipient of the 2012 Excellence in the Reporting of Social Issues Award

Katha Pollitt, The Nation

The annual ASA Award for Excellence in the Reporting of Social Issues honors individuals for their promotion of sociological findings and a broader vision of sociology. The 2012 Award recipient is Katha Pollitt, whose many columns for The Nation have profoundly shaped the public's understanding of social and sociological issues. Pollitt's original and incisive columns cover issues from gender and social justice, to religion, the culture wars, and social inequality. Three influential social scientists and public intellectuals will talk about Pollitt's contributions to the national appreciation of sociological research and Pollitt will then reflect on connections between her writing and our discipline.

258. Departmental Management and Leadership Workshop. Using Assessment Data to Enhance Student Learning Outcomes

Hyatt Regency Denver

Session Organizer: Rebecca G. Adams, University of North Carolina-Greensboro

Leader: Rebecca G. Adams, University of North Carolina-Greensboro

Co-Leader: Jodi Pettazzoni, University of North Carolina-Greensboro

In broad terms, the goal of this workshop is to provide insight and information about academic program assessment, how academic program assessment can contribute to student learning, and how it can otherwise help advance the discipline. The ultimate goal of a workshop is to help participants gain practical knowledge or skills that can be applied to the development of academic program assessment plans for their department's programs. Attendees are advised to bring copies or an electronic means of accessing any student learning outcome assessment plan that is in place in their department or higher-level unit and any relevant policy or procedural guidelines (e.g., unit, institutional, system, state, or regional accrediting organization guidelines). The workshop leader will start by addressing the following frequently asked questions and others posed by the attendees: what is academic assessment; what are the forces behind the academic assessment movement; what is the Voluntary System of Accountability; why do some sociologists resist the development and implementation of academic assessment plans; what is the difference between grading and assessment; and what are the benefits to be derived from the assessment of student learning? After providing answers to frequently asked questions, the workshop leader will cover three additional topics: How to Develop an Academic Program Assessment Plan, How to Demonstrate Continuous Improvement by Closing the Loop, and How to Make Assessment as Painless as Possible. In discussing how to develop an academic program assessment plan, the presenter will cover: writing a student learning outcome statement using Bloom's taxonomy, measuring academic program student learning outcomes, finding sources of evidence for metrics, and setting targets. Finally, attendees will learn to demonstrate continuous improvement by "closing the loop" on a student learning outcome. Topics covered in the section on how to demonstrate continuous improvement will be: reviewing findings, using results to develop an action plan, implementing an action plan, and documenting continuous improvement. Finally, workshop participants will learn how to make assessment plans as painless as possible by building on work that faculty are already doing, writing meaningful goals, and developing plans that are sustainable.

259. Professional Development Workshop. Educating Employers on What Sociology Majors Offer

Session Organizer: Kathy Shepherd Stolley, Virginia Wesleyan College

Leader: Kathy Shepherd Stolley, Virginia Wesleyan College

Panelists: Karen Albright, University of Colorado
Marv Finkelstein, Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville

Melody Gaye Lehnerer, College of Southern Nevada

This session addresses the question of how do we, as professional sociologists, engage employers and get them excited about the opportunity to hire sociology majors? In the context of increased emphases on applied and public sociology and the realities of today's economic climate, if we are to prepare our students to go into the non-academic workplace, there must be receptive places for them to go! The session will include time for interaction with the audience, so come and join in the conversation.

260. Policy and Research Workshop. Status of the Job Market for New PhDs

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association

Leader: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania

Panelist: Nicole M. Van Vooren, American Sociological Association

As with other professional associations we are concerned about the future of our discipline and profession. If there are no jobs for new PhDs the discipline will not renew itself and ultimately its perspectives, understandings and modes of analyses will fade or be usurped by other disciplines. The purpose of this workshop is to provide information about the status of the job market to faculty members, to director's of graduate studies, and to recent PhDs or to PhD candidates who are concerned about their futures. We'll present the findings from the 2012 survey of 2011-2012 jobs. We'll provide information about the prime time for hiring, the most advertised specialties, type of departments in which jobs are located, and other disciplines advertising for sociologists. Along with these issues, workshop participants can discuss job search strategies that improve competitiveness; views of applied, policy, and research positions; and what additional information would be useful to candidates.

261. Teaching Workshop. Engaging Diverse Viewpoints: Informing Pedagogy with Research on Deep Learning and Intellectual Complexity

Colorado Convention Center

Session Organizer: Theodore C. Wagenaar, Miami University

Leader: Theodore C. Wagenaar, Miami University

Co-Leader: Keith A. Roberts, Hanover College

The Association of American Colleges and Universities recently released a report on “Engaging Diverse Viewpoints: What is the Campus Climate for Perspective Taking?” The volume summarizes research on 24,000 undergraduates and 9,000 campus professionals on experiences with learning about taking the perspectives of others. The authors note that although we place great emphasis on students’ ability to take on perspectives other than their own, we are not very successful at teaching this skill. We summarize this research and offer discussion questions for follow up. We also pose some teaching strategies for enhancing perspective taking and underscore how sociology is unique in its contributions to students’ interest in and ability to take on diverse viewpoints. We ask that you read this brief report prior to the workshop (see tinyurl.com/83pddc2). We also summarize the work that Roberts (2002, 2008, 2011) has done on deep learning. A good deal of research on critical thinking indicates that perspective taking is the prerequisite skill for virtually every type of critical thinking. It is also the prerequisite for doing sociology—undergraduates must learn to see things from a different place on the social landscape than the one they have occupied. This lies at the heart of doing ethnographic work. Moreover, seeing how the macro and meso forces shape lives at the micro level is a form of perspective taking, as is the process of scrutinizing a social process or issue from more than one theoretical perspective. All of this requires an expanded ability to role-take. Moreover, perspective taking is at the core of deep learning (as opposed to surface learning for the short term.) This workshop will lay the foundations for understanding the centrality of expanded perspective-taking at every level in the curriculum. Participants will then be engaged in discovery writing and small groups to crystallize their thinking on perspective taking and deep learning, and will be asked to help develop appropriate teaching and assessment strategies. Summary discussion and analysis will then follow.

Summary 1. "Participatory Democracy" and "Deliberative Democracy": some introductory definitions 2. "Beyond Participatory Democracy": the contributions of Benjamin Barber and Jane Mansbridge 2.1 Benjamin Barber: searching for a "strong" democracy 2.2 Jane Mansbridge: "unitary" and "adversary" democracy 3. The origins of Deliberative Democracy: interpretations of the American Constitution 3.1 Bessette: the American Constitution as design of a "deliberative democracy".

On one hand, it seeks to comprehend the nature of two notions, "participatory democracy" and "deliberative democracy", starting with their theoretical genealogy, their first formulations, the reasons that supported their elaboration, and the Without a sustained participation in public matters, the essence of democracy (and the concept of citizenship) is being affected. As privatization prevails, NGOs linked to the grassroots are being affected because their origin and support stem from the public spaces of society. While in the past the grassroots NGOs were the counterbalance of the traditional politics, and with this they strengthened the political discussion, their present diminution reduces the possibilities of that debate.

This condition is further increased by some features of globalization, like the patterns of consumption, or the agreements of free trade and financial relationships, as they reduce the feeling of being part in decisionmaking processes in their countries. The strengthening of public policies.
