The Revolutions of 1989 formed part of a revolutionary wave in the late 1980s and early 1990s that resulted in the end of communist rule in Central and Eastern Europe and beyond. The period is sometimes called the Fall of Nations or the Autumn of Nations, a play on the term Spring of Nations that is sometimes used to describe the Revolutions of 1848. The events of the full-blown revolution first began in Poland in 1989 and continued in Hungary, East Germany, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Romania. One Box 13.3: Political culture and the collapse of Soviet Communism. It is indisputable that Russia has enjoyed less success than most states in East and Central Europe in managing the transition to democracy since 1991. 74 years of communist rule had been preceded by a dozen years of limited parliamentary democracy under the last Tsar and centuries of autocracy. There was no national democratic tradition on which reformers could draw. To many Western observers, Putin's effortless assertion and retention of power, despite scandals like the murder of the exiled dissident Alexander Litvinenko, prove that Russian political culture lags far behind other European states in its acceptance of liberal democratic values.
